Sacred Geometry and Healing

"Jeannie's lecture on Sacred Geometry and Healing was incredibly insightful, going beneath the surface, uncovering extremely valuable information about sacred geometry applications that are not found anywhere on the planet."

On April 1, 2004, Rev. Jeannie Montague will present her work with Genonetics, the use of sacred geometric forms for healing and spiritual growth.

Two- and three-dimensional geometric forms have been used and studied throughout human history. They were in use long before the time of the Greeks, but one particular set of five three-dimensional forms has been given the name "Platonic solids." According to Robert Lawler in Sacred Geometry, they were so named because Plato believed these forms were the beginning shapes involved in creation.

The five Platonic solids are the tetrahedron or three-sided pyramid, the hexahedron or cube, the octahedron or the complete four-sided pyramid, the dodecahedron, and the icosahedron. These forms along with other mathematical symbols and language can be looked upon as mathematical names of God, or symbols and archetypes that belong to the collective consciousness of the universe.

In her engaging manner, Jeannie will explore how geometric forms such as the Platonic solids can be used in the areas of spirituality and health. For instance, which shapes help with breathing difficulties or assist in detoxifying the body? Which could help you fuse with your Holy Guardian Angel? There are geometric forms that can support a new project and give it an energetic punch, help in a psychological crisis, and can assist one while doing regression work. Other forms can help with various physical problems. Jeannie will also share information about methods to aid in forming the Sacred Phoenix, which connects you to your highest guidance.

The lecture will include experiential time for you to try out the energy of the geometric forms for yourself.
